London - Glazer Delmar, the well-established South London solicitors, has won 'preferred legal supplier' status from the Notting Hill Housing Trust and has recently started work on a three year contract which will see the firm provide tenancy and leasehold management services to this high profile RSL.

Founded 16 years ago, Glazer Delmar has a long-standing reputation in the social housing sector and will now add Notting Hill to its expanding RSL client list which includes The Co-operative Development Society, Centrepoint, Thames Housing Association, Cara Irish Housing Association, The Carr-Gomm Society, Broomleigh Housing Association, Family Housing Group and The William Sutton Housing Trust.

The Notting Hill Housing Trust currently owns or manages 19,000 properties and along with Broomleigh, Family and William Sutton are members of the 'G17' grouping of the largest housing associations in the country.

Gerard O'Toole, Head of Social Housing at Glazer Delmar says:-

"We are proud and delighted to have been chosen by Notting Hill to undertake this contract as it re-inforces our commitment to the sector and serves to underline our determination to offer a professional service in a flexible and innovative way..."

Our research shows that more and more RSLs are looking for law firms to provide them with a broad range of services including training, regular surgeries, assistance to enable them to pursue cases on a DIY basis, as well as traditional representation in more complex cases and we hope that the addition of NHHT will encourage others to take advantage of our approach."

John Baldwin, Head of Housing Services at Notting Hill says:-

"Despite stiff competition from larger city firms, we have appointed Glazer Delmar as our preferred supplier as we were impressed by their refreshingly enthusiastic and supportive attitude to DIY cases, their competitively priced bid and the fact that they bring with them, so many years of experience with social housing landlords and tenants. We look forward to working with Gerard and his team and building a long lasting relationship between our two organisations."

Established in 1989, Glazer Delmar is now one of the largest law firms in South East London with 40 staff, including 3 partners and 19 solicitors/fee earners currently specialising in
